HEARTWORM DISEASE

Caring for the Health of Your Cat

CATS can get Heartworm Disease

Living in the heart and lungs, heartworms can cause serious disease.

And just one heartworm can result in permanent damage — or even death. Treatment for heartworm disease is risky* and expensive, but prevention is easy.

Signs of Heartworm Disease in cats

- coughing
- vomiting
- breathing difficulties
- sluggishness
- sudden death

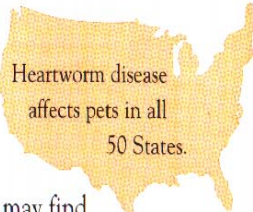

Even INDOOR CATS are vulnerable

Indoor cats are not safe from heartworms. According to a recent survey, 55% of cats testing positive for heartworm infection were kept exclusively or mostly indoors.†

Year-round prevention provides THE BEST CARE

Since it's hard to know when your cat's been exposed to heartworm disease, it's best to provide continuous protection. You may find it more convenient to get into the habit of giving your cat's preventive on a monthly basis.
